

Jeff Mount
Leadership Statement

Don't take yourself too seriously and surround yourself with good people. I don't pretend to be the smartest person in the room, and I'm open to ideas from those around me. Input from everyone involved is critical if you want to achieve consensus. I tend to think about things before saying much. Some people might think I am shy or slow reacting, but the truth is I often need to think about the subject at hand before responding. I also believe that to be a good leader, you need to be a good team player. Be willing to let someone else take the lead on a topic or project and pitch in however you can.